Recently I have been deluged with a great deal of interest in the true golden age of female impersonation, before AIDS, heavy drug use, and the modern world of medicine as we know it now! A time when make-up, ass pads, bird seed sacks, (to give the impression of breasts) was all a fellow needed to create the ultimate illusion of bold femininity. The true glamour of that period which lasted from the mid 1950's to the 1970's where the banner years for the professional crossdresser in my opinion, a time when owning a fabulous French pasteon wig was the equivalent of driving a new sports car! It gives me great pride and pleasure to share with you a small glimpse of an era that to few are left to recall, a time when basic ordinary men transformed themselves to the most magnificent creatures the world has ever witnessed on the pages of FEMALE MIMICS the most influential transgendered magazine available at the time. As I strive to continue this tradition as publishing editor of FMI in bring you the most spectacular faces and figures of the next century! It is with great pride and pleasure we present Jimmy James in this issue who is a very special vision to be sure along with some very classic beauties, and remember as we use to sing in the "Jewel Box Revue" "and not one of us are girls"...

THE GOLDEN AGE OF FEMALE MIMICS THEIR STARDOM . THE PRICE!

In the golden age of crossdressing Female Mimics was there to document the various drag events, and do personal profiles on the stars of the day. These were images that started to form what is now an accepted life style in most parts of the country! But these were some of the fabulous pioneers who at one time forged ahead in women clothes at the risk of arrest, imprisonment and a great deal of ridicule and harassment from the general public. Remember back in the fifties and sixties when the likes of Terri Noel, Toby Marsh, Tammy Novak and some other Mimic classics were around wearing ladies under things, high heels, and wigs was against the law unless a certain amount of male articles of clothing could have you spending the weekend in jail and not on stage in feathers and heavy make-up! To our golden age sisters of yester year we salute you.

"ADONIS IN HIGH HEELS"

As soon as Tony put his foot inside the door of the apartment, he could sense that the air was charged with electricity. "I'm how, Diane," he called, eager to show her the new clothing he had bought for both of them. Under his arm, wrapped in pink tissue paper, was a delightful silken gown — a perfect size 14 — which both would take pleasure in wearing. Tony's tasseled shoes made soft sounds as he peered into the kitchen.

Diane, her raven black hair matching the sealskin leather housecoat she wore, her eyebrow a thick line which otherwise would mar the beauty of her ivory skin, bit her red lips. "It's about time you came home, Tony!" she said impatiently, surveying his muscular figure in tweed suit. She could hardly wait for him to get rid of those mannish clothes and slip into some soft silk scanty underwear, lacey bra and a brand-new dress. "Were you kept 'busy' with that blonde at the office?" Her long slender legs, almost hidden by the shiny sealskin leather coat, peeped out to reveal enchanting evening shoes. Diane wore a black suede bare-back slipper that flaunted a huge hand sewn Bugle-Bead and Rhinestone Bow with a math-mate at the top of the needle-narrow heel. It glistened with enchanting glamour as her lean legs moved.

Tony swallowed hard. Those were his shoes and he wanted to protest that she wore them when doing such mundane activities as housework.. It was such a delightful coincidence that both of them could wear the same size shoe and garments. Of course, Tony was very muscular, the picture of an Adonis and nobody would ever guess that such a masculine type person would get such a thrill out of wearing frilly clothing. Tony remembered how he and Diane had once discussed their clothing budget. As a means of economizing, Tony suggested that he might wear her garments whenever she wouldn't be needing them at home. It helped cut down expenses. Tony, of course, was delighted to wear the soft satin slacks, the intimate thigh length bloomers, especially the pair that was midnight black and embroidered with rainbow-tinted sequins so that his supple figure looked like a galaxy when he moved about.

"I'm talking to you!"

snapped Diane harshly, her delicately shod foot became an angry serpent, stamping on the floor. The toe, almost as round and perfect as a shiny nickel, was powerful, determined and awe-inspiring.

Tony swallowed. "See here, Diane," he said carefully, "there's nothing between Laura and myself. She happens to be a good secretary and I depend upon her a great deal." He was impatient to finish this talk and go upstairs, slip out of his mannish clothes, and get into the new gown he held beneath his arm. "Would you like to get dressed for dinner?" he asked to change the subject.

"Very well," she said, quickly. "I'll be ID you."

"No, no," he backed away. It would spoil the surprise. "I'll do it myself and then come into the dining room."

Before she could protest, he hurried out of sight, then locked himself in the little dressing room that adjoined the bathroom. He got rid of his business clothes, then turned on the stinging needle-like shower. His figure, although muscular and an inspiration to any sculptor, was on the lean side and had been thoroughly trained so that he should not have any delusions of being a superior male. It all started just before he had become formally engaged to Diane. She would go out with him on many dates and believed that men could be so much more attractive if they wore more flattering clothes. Tony would never forget the time he wore his first corset — it was his initiation into a world of transvestism. They had finished swimming in an isolated cove and after being dried off, Diane brought out her little leather satchel. She withdrew — a girdle!

Tony had gasped. It looked like an angry weapon — made of satin, the girdle could be deceiving because it was doubly enforced with a circle of thick, shiny steel ribs. These ribs did not bend so easily — they did not conform to the figure. The figure had to conform to the girdle and Tony had to admit that he certainly was fascinated. "How does it feel to wear such a girdle?"

"He touched the shiny leather laces, fingered the many series of Polished copper eyelets and noticed that the girdle was thoroughly designed with flowers, little bouquets of multicolored blossoms and other frilly designs.

"You'll soon find out," she said and both of them stood up. "For a girdle to serve its purpose, it must be worn right against the skin. Get rid of that bathing suit and we'll start now.$"

Sheepishly, Tony did as he was told, feeling quite embarrassed. His sense of self consciousness was short-lived, however. Diane lost no time. In another moment, the steel-ribbed girdle enclasped Tony's muscular torso. He tried to struggle to get free but he was entirely surrounded by the girdle! In a few moments, the laces were properly inserted and Tony's mannish waist began to feel squeezed in.

"But men can't wear such girdles," he protested, trying to catch his breath because the laces were creeping upward, to his shoulder blades.

Diane gave a short laugh. "You're a man — an

Adonis, judging from your muscles like a Greek God — and you're wearing this girdle, Tony. Don't deny it — you like to wear a form-fitting foundation garment like this, don't you?" Her sharp nails held onto his muscular arms as support while she laced up with her free arm.

Tears came into his eyes. The pressure from the girdle and her nails was too much. Everything became hazy. From his flanks to his armpits, he was welded into the steel girdle. At last, it was finished. Tony could hardly bend. He glanced at his waist and saw that his flanks were now widespread but his waist-line had been successfully nipped in — it was unbelievable! How positively miraculous. The hazy feeling returned and Tony swooned!

How patient Diane had been. No matter how dizzy he became, unaccustomed to the tight confinement of the very potent girdle, Diane would help revive him. She even kept a thoroughly soaked sponge handy and whenever he lay flat, she'd squeeze the soft sponge, drawing out droplets of reviving water upon his face.

Tony had always been grateful to Diane and it was this deep sense of appreciation that led to the proposal and marriage. Tony loved to get into a pair of blue or sea green scantier.4, especially those with tight elastic at the thighs and waist. He'd then put on his rubbery garter belt. Oh-h-h how it would stretch and stretch, and then he'd don a nice slip, with crocheted V neckline. Of course, the thigh length silk stockings were the most joy. He spent the better part of a half hour slipping his foot into the silky garment, thrilling to the soft, titillating feel of soft silk against his toes (especially the big toe) and then loving the luxurious feel of silk covering his legs, right up to his thighs. Tony never tired of shopping for silk stockings.

For special occasions, he usually selected hosiery with spangles just below the ankle bones'. For ordinary evening wear, Tony delighted in sheer hosiery, which set off his muscular legs to their best advantage. Oddly enough he didn't seem so muscular or Adonis-like when wearing female clothing. Diane had often remarked that whenever a man gets delusions of his own importance, squeezing him into a tight fitting waist-nipper, one which made a man's waist as narrow as it should be, it helped to remind him that women are entitled to some rights as well.

Tony unwrapped the package, in the little dressing room. With a sigh of excitement, he held up his latest purchase — charming powder blue, it was a pure silken sheath which was shockingly daring as it revealed a bare back scooped almost to the waist. The gown boasted of a crescent cutout over the bust. The salesman had said to Tony, "Your, wife's every line will be repeated, curve for curve, right from the bateau neck front to the kick pleat behind."

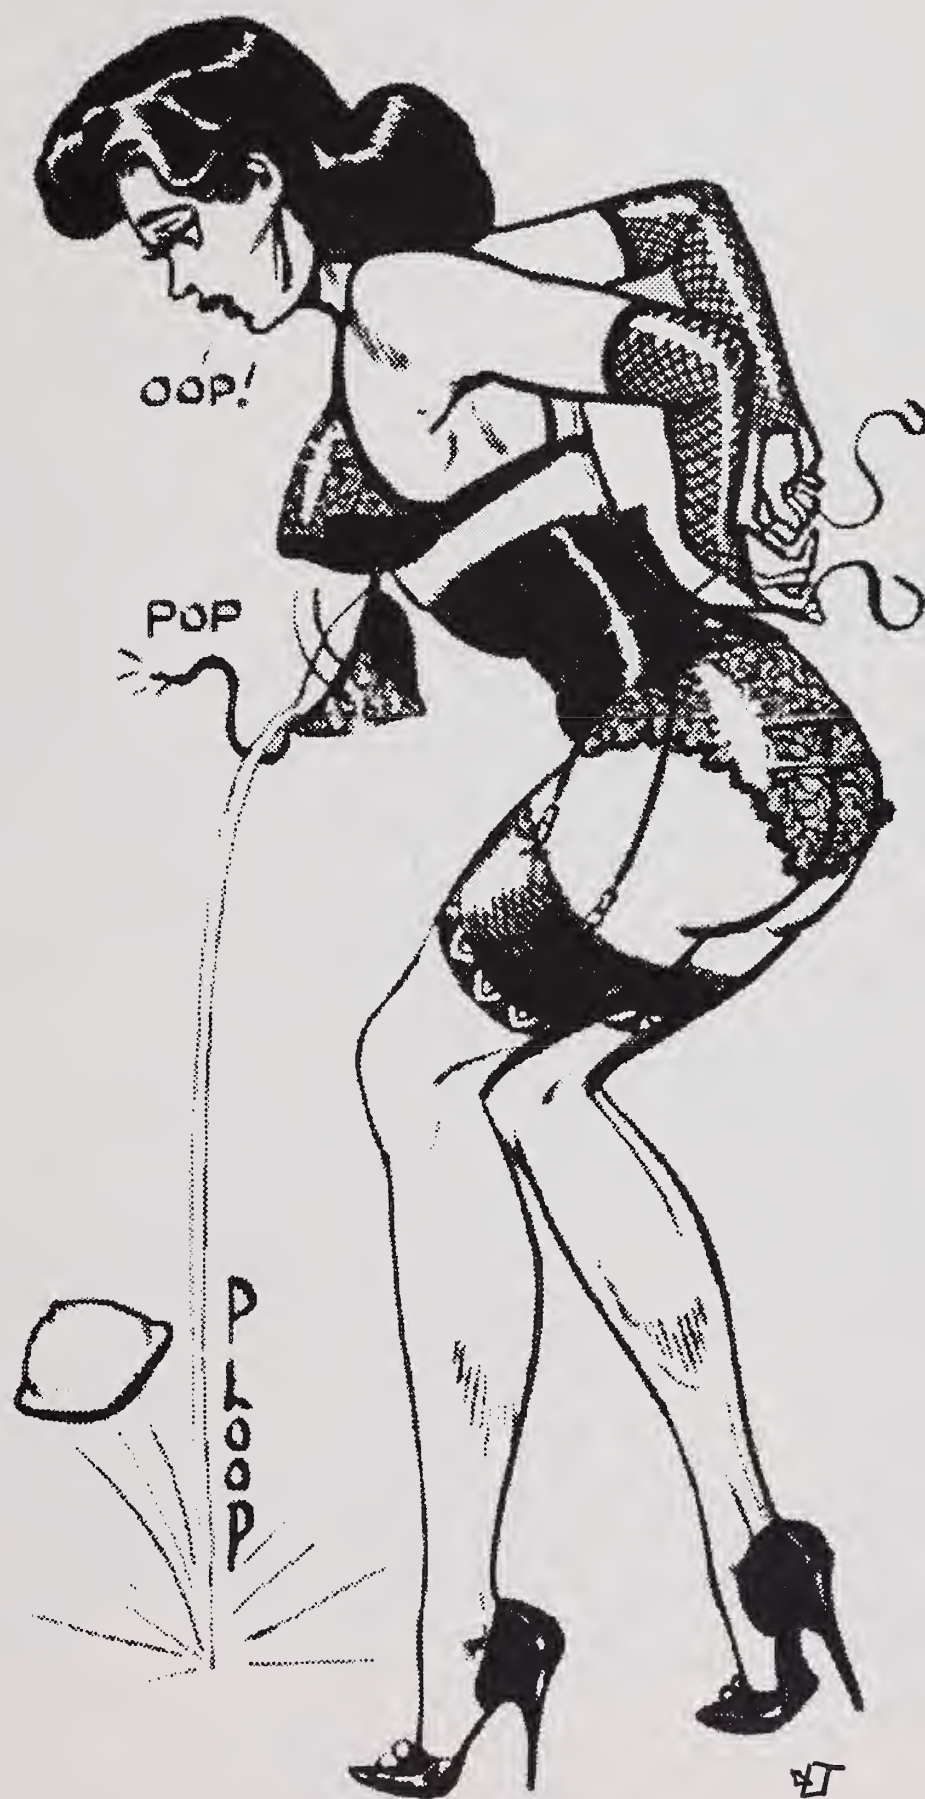

Tony had grinned. The dress was for himself but he could not obviously admit it. And besides, he would not let Diane wear it. He bought it and it belonged to him. She was always using his stockings, his bloomers and bra and it made him positively furious. He wondered if other transvestites had the same problem with their wives. As Tony prepared to shower, he smiled to himself. He really had much to be thankful for — Diane was such an understanding wife. She understood his penchant for feminine apparel and not only approved of it but encouraged it. What did he have to complain about?

The sharp needle-spray of the shower brought his thoughts back to the present. Was Diane suspicious of his affair with Laura, his office secretary? The cool water sprayed over his face, thoroughly soaking him from the tip of his thick, curly black hair, down to his legs. Laura was getting impatient. Lately, she had even suggested that he leave Diane. How could Tony even think of such a thing, after all that Diane did, especially to introduce him to the wonderful world of transvestism. I Such gratitude is not short-lived.

He stepped out of the tub and went into the dressing room. He was getting to be an expert in make-up. Naked, he sat down on the leather covered dressing bench. A warm glow spread throughout his body as the intimate feeling of leather overpowered his senses. He dabbed cologne behind his shoulders, then fluffed his neck with a puffy powder puff that was dipped in fragrant face powder. He started rouging his cheeks (he was thankful

Letters to Kim Christy

If you wish to write to Kim and possibly have your letter published please send all correspondence to F.M.I P.O BOX 1622, STUDIO CITY CA. 91614. All letters sent are considered for unconditional publication unless otherwise specified. If you wish to have your pictures published as well, Please see the new requirements for model releases and ID on page 39.

Dear Kim Christy,

I have been reading Female Mimics for many years and have always wondered a few things. When did the first FMI go on sale? How many issues have been published? Have you been involved with the magazine for a long time? How many people work on the magazine? Do you have a waiting list to model for your great publication? How can a devoted fan get your autograph? Well enough questions, please answer!

Sincerely, Beverly

Dear Beverly,

The first issue of "Female Mimics" went on sale in May of 1964. FMI has always been a bi-monthly magazine and we have published many "specials", so compute that. I have been with FMI since its conception! We have contributors from all around the world and our dedicated staff consists of approximately 10. We have many people who say they would like to model but only a select few do it. The quickest way to get my signature is through Leoram Inc. The offer a membership to "Kim Christy's Fan Club" and you receive an autographed photo of the one and only along with a discount off of each purchase you make through their mail order catalogue! See pages 42-47.

Thanks for asking...Kim

Dear Kim Christy,

I enclose a copy of an editorial from U.S Today re Richard Speck, which I find to be odious. He is about as representative of the gender community as Hitler was of the Catholic community. This really an unfortunate editorial because it will only I imagine fuel the kind of hate and intolerance that already permeates this world in abundance.

I fear that mean-spirited people like Rev.Jerry Falwell will seize this as a chance to do further damage and further spread the gospel of hate.

Too bad...isn't it?

Sincerely
Jackie

Specter of Speck

Richard Speck - killer, she-male and all-around sick twist - continues to haunt Chicago five years after his death. A videotape has surfaced showing the late and totally unlamented murderer wearing lingerie, taking drugs, having sex and boasting that if authorities knew how much fun he was having, they would make him leave.

Not likely, although if they knew what kind of fun he was having, they should have raided his cell faster than you can say Victoria's Secret. Still, the video is one of a string of embarrassments for Illinois' prisons. Others include allegations of sexual misconduct at a women's prison and charges that gangs operate unfettered behind prison wall.

All of which has led some lawmakers to ask why prison isn't more miserable. Speck seemed anything but. Adding injury to that insult Speck's video is bound to make it harder for those traumatized by his crime - in 1966, he slaughtered eight nursing students to put it in the past.

Alas, the answer is barely adequate. Prison is indeed hard punishment for those sane enough to know better. For those who don't care, though, no amount of misery will matter. Against that, the only consolation is that at least big-breasted Speck indulged himself off the street, among those who themselves deserve no better.

Shoko Asaharag, leader of Japan's Aum Shinnyo cult, knows what Speck was talking about. Asahara is being held in solitary on charges of minding a nerve-gas. attack in a Tokyo subway last year that killed 11 and injured thousands.

In an interview from his cell Wednesday, Asahara said: "The concrete is so thick, it is like a cave. I am getting a great chance to meditate. I want nobody to take this opportunity away from me."

Not likely. But it is curious that Asaharu and Speck should send the same message in the same week- Maybe meditation has enabled Asahara to visit Speck's hellish astral plane. They'd make a perfect couple.

that he was not one of those men with heavy beards) then put on foundation cream to be followed with a honey-colored pancake malzeup. He fluffed his hair. Well, he'd have to wear one of the smart little wigs he had bought last month. Dark, flowing hair down to the nape of his neck, made him look like any attractive young girl. No one could ever guess that he was really a rugged type of man. It was so much fun to play a dual role in life. Especially when Diane appreciated all his efforts to look attractive.

He slipped his fingers into a drawer and came out with a pair of transparent wispy undergarments. First came the soft panties. They were embroidered silken lace in gay scallops, made spicy with tight little velvet bows just where the bulge of thigh became noticeable. Can Can Black, the panties matched the silken foam-rubber padded bra that he wore. Tony always felt regretful that his own chest, although muscular, did not have enough "bust" and he had to resort to a padded bra.

He hooked himself up, then hurriedly slipped into a half-slip, and then reached for the delightful powder blue silken sheath. He wiggled into its soft warmth and hummed a little tune. It was so wonderful to wear such clothes at home, in privacy. What would Laura, at the office say, if she knew of his little hobby? He had hinted it to her on numerous occasions and she had, remarkably enough, been quite broadminded.

"If you like female clothes, it's perfectly all right," she once said. "In fact," upon an afterthought, "you'd look nice in a dress." Both had enjoyed a hearty laugh but that was as far as the matter went. At last, after Tony had slipped into some pale blue silken stockings, then into a pair of skyscraper-heeled leather pumps, he was ready for dinner. The leather pumps were so thrilling that Tony just had to pause and stare down at them. The heels, a perfect seven inches, had been tortuous at first. Quite obviously, it takes experience in order to wear such heels comfortably. But Tony was not easily discouraged and time and again, despite all discomfort, he continued walking with them. First a short trip, then longer ones. It was worth the effort because the pumps were highly unusual. The flange vamp formed a 3-toned crown on the modified, open-toed pump. Gold kid and white calf joined together on the vamp and the wedge to make his feet look graceful, queenly — sure to make any woman envious which goes to show that men can wear feminine clothes with more appeal and luster than any female.

The skyscraper heels, which made him feel breathtakingly dainty, echoed as he went downstairs and faced the dining room. Diane — she wore a sul saw hiser. Dark brown, the leather was soft and graceful. And then — Tony saw LAURA!

At first, his carmine painted mouth was open. How positively surprising Laura was staring at him her boss, dressed in a stunning evening gown and looking like any perfectly dressed young lady should look.

Good . . . evening. . . . was all he could say!

Laura smiled indulgently. "Why Tony," she purred, "you never told me you could wear dresses with such glarnour."

Tony, now overcome with thankfulness that his labors in dressing were being appreciate'd, made a hasty approach to Laura and they both clasped hands. Laura was positively delighted with his outfit and she agreed not to tell anyone of his little secret. During dinner, it came out that Diane had invited Laura as a little "surprise" for Tony. As his bracelets jangled while passing the sugar howl, Tony knew that Diane had deliberately done such a thing in order to "shame" him before Laura. But her little plan had backfired. Laura now loved him all the more and he was seriously thinking of making his love more permanent.

with sheer ecstasy, he almost wept with happiness when he saw how brand new they looked, how fragrant the musky leather scent tickled his nostrils and teased his senses. The slinky black laces, looking like live snakes, almost opened their arms to his nimble fingers. Tenderly, he unlaced the boots, then gripped the heel and toe in his hands. There was a "plopping" noise as Diane's foot was released from the leather boot and then Tony repeated the process with her other foot.

When it was over, both girls sat side by side. Diane stared at Laura intently . . . very intently. The soft blonde hair, the upthrustosom, the deep cleavage and the milky white softness that was the deep valley betweenher breasts.

ISSUE OF F.M.I #95

After dinner, Diane stretched out on the chaise lounge and told Tony to help remove her knee-length boots. It was a chore he always looked forward to. He knelt down, gripped her booted leg in his hands. Overcome
